ANTARCTIC EXPLORER
 Some people never know when they have had enough. Sir Douglas Mawson, the Australian explorer of Antarctica, announces that, despite his 63 years, he is planning another Antarctic expedition.
 Mawson has been there twice. The first time, nearly 35 years ago, he explored the Antarctic coast region known as Adelia Land, directly below Australia. This he called truly "the home of the blizzard." A 90-mile wind was a commonplace, and on occasion the wind reached 200 miles an hour. About 15 years ago he explored Kemp and Enderby Lands, below Africa. In between, and in fact almost everywhere along the shore line, is unknown territory.
 Additional interest for Americans comes from Mawson's further statement that his ship will be the Wyatt Earp in which Lincoln Ellsworth carried out his explorations. Ships that can stand the pressure of the Antarctic ice are few, so that an old boat is often safer than a new one.
 People will follow Mawson's explorations with interest, but most Americans would prefer to stay away from the world's coldest region. They'd rather let Mawson do it, and read about it later in a book.

DEMOBILIZING PROGRESS
 Types of warfare change like other forms of human activity, and lately the changes are more rapid and impressive than ever before—so rapid indeed that experts seem to find themselves driven to new methods and devices not merely year by year, but almost month by month. David Dietz, science commentator, points out that big changes in the art of war, from static fighting to the moving tank, occurred toward the end of World War I, and that World War II advanced beyond that with the tremendous advances of V-2 rockets and the atomic bomb. And what next?
 Perhaps the advance in technical warfare will stop here for a while. Millions of Americans devoutly hope so. Appreciating the vast power of these new weapons, they nevertheless would rather see these wonderful weapons turned into plowshares and pruning hooks, as the old Biblical prophecy foretold. Mankind could well endure a respite from military progress and a forward movement to simple life and easy, natural things.

PEACE CHALLENGE
 "Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity." These words of the pioneer educator Horace Mann are cut on a statue to him on the campus of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, where he was the college head until his death in 1839.
 With the war over and its call for gallantry and self-sacrifice silenced, a moral let-down is creeping over a tired world. Youth particularly, too young for battle calls of the last few years, is likely to emerge into tomorrow's stage feeling it has missed its chance, that no exciting adventures are left for it. Here in Mann's philosophy is a reminder that humanity remains to be served; that a life can still measure its achievements by its contribution to the world's vast needs. The job of peace is less spectacular than the demands of war. But it is a job. And somehow the world's people, particularly its young people, must be made to see it as a thrilling job.

LEST WE FORGET
 The worst offenses recorded against the Japanese in their recent war have been the brutal and barbarous treatment of civilians, and especially of British and American women. The facts have been revealed slowly and hesitantly, and much remains to be told. The supreme test of civilization for ages has been primarily the honor and respect in which it holds women—not merely a nation's own women, but the sex in general. The unspeakable horrors of that phase of the war, conceivable to the Orient but abandoned for ages by western chivalry, will probably be remembered when other phases of conflict are forgotten.
 It is enough for the present to remind the world how low a large part of mankind later

A QUESTION OF ETHICS

This article will not deal with the sale of the Pullman Company to the railroads or any other customer. It will limit itself to a general discussion of propriety—to what the lawyers like to call the ethics of their profession. And to make sure that no one gets me wrong, I am willing to say here and now that there is nothing legally wrong in what Thurman Arnold has done and that a great many others have done exactly the same thing, but neither the legality nor the usefulness of the matter makes it morally or ethically right—and it is that that I am ventilating.

Thurman Arnold was in charge of the anti-trust prosecution of the Pullman Company which, from 1867 to the present day, provided the American people with various and sundry comforts on the railroads. It operated more or less to the satisfaction of the public until 1930, when Thurman Arnold, in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, went after the company as a trust and licked it through-out the courts so that a dissolution was ordered dividing the manufacturing from the servicing parts of the business and giving the Pullman Company the choice of keeping one or the other.

The Pullman Company chose to remain manufacturers; they must therefore dispose of their servicing business by March 23, 1936, in a manner satisfactory to the courts. Pursuing a court order, they have made an offer to the railroads which the railroads have accepted. But certain banking and brokerage firms have pushed themselves into the situation with offers to buy, which is a legitimate thing to do.

But here is the rub: Thurman Arnold, who as an employee of the government of the United States fought the "Pullman monopoly" in the courts and smashed the company so that it is forced to sell part of its business which it has conducted since 1867, appears in the current transactions as counsel for the Young-Kirby-Otis and Company group who wish to succeed to the "Pullman monopoly" by establishing a monopoly under a different ownership.

Now, I cannot get excited about the "monopoly" feature of this business, for it is in the nature of the service that it should be in a single organization. I was sure at the time that Thurman Arnold pursued his favorite course of breaking up what more able and constructive citizens had built that the American people were gaining nothing by this legalistic exhibitionism. Nevertheless, the courts were on his side.

But now he is on the other side. He is no longer the lawyer for the government but for private clients. And he is in a cause arising from an action which he originated while he was a government employee. And whereas he opposed the Pullman Company because it was a monopoly, he is now seeking to establish it as a monopoly in the interest of the Young-Kirby-Otis and Company group who are not railroads but entrepreneurs seeing a main chance and taking it. There can be no objection to this group doing business where they can, but the switching of position by Thurman Arnold raises a question of legal ethics that will not down.

To an increasing degree, lawyers take positions in the government, gain prestige and experience at the expense of the American people, stimulate litigation "for the common weal," and then switch over to private practice in which they appear in matters which they handled while in the employ of the government. No law forbids them to do so. Lawyers regard it as legitimate practice, although they call a man who picks up a client at an accident a shyster. The general public grins at the performance and praises the smart boy who cleans up as the most recent type of go-getter.

Nevertheless, the practice degrades the processes of government. It has been suggested that no government official ought to appear before a government bureau which had employed him for from two to four years and he left office. I think it would be more ethical to propose that no government official should ever be permitted, in private practice, to appear in any cause with which he ever had a direct or indirect connection while in government employ.

DIFFICULTY IN READING

While most youngsters go through the usual school grades without much trouble with reading, there are some who have great difficulty, much to the surprise of teachers and the other children. That some have trouble with arithmetic, spelling and drawing is taken as a matter of course but reading, "that's easy."

However not being able to read properly is a serious matter to the boy and girl and may lead to all kinds of trouble to the pupil, his parents, his teachers and even to the family physician.

In the Journal of Lancet, Minneapolis, Dr. T. H. Wolf states that disability in reading may play a part in the physical complaints and emotional tensions found in school children particularly in those 9 to 10 years of age or older. From the fourth, fifth and sixth grades on, the ability to read assumes an increasingly important part in nearly every school subject. A youngster unable to compete with his classmates because he is unable to read properly, finds himself at a disadvantage so that he tries to make up for this disadvantage in various ways, because of his unhappiness. He may develop a behavior problem, become sullen and refuse to cooperate with classmates and teachers. He may become the bully or keep entirely to himself. On the other hand he may develop under the old complaints—headaches, indigestion, fainting spells and "fits."

When a youngster behaves in this manner it is perhaps natural for teacher and classmates to think he is slow or stupid, but careful investigation and sympathetic instruction shows he is not stupid as an uncorrected condition of eye or ear may be responsible for the reading difficulties.

"The physician should look for muscular unbalance in the eyes which may cause a lack of fusion (working together of the eyes) when looking at an object. Similarly there are some tones or sounds that this child does not hear correctly at all."

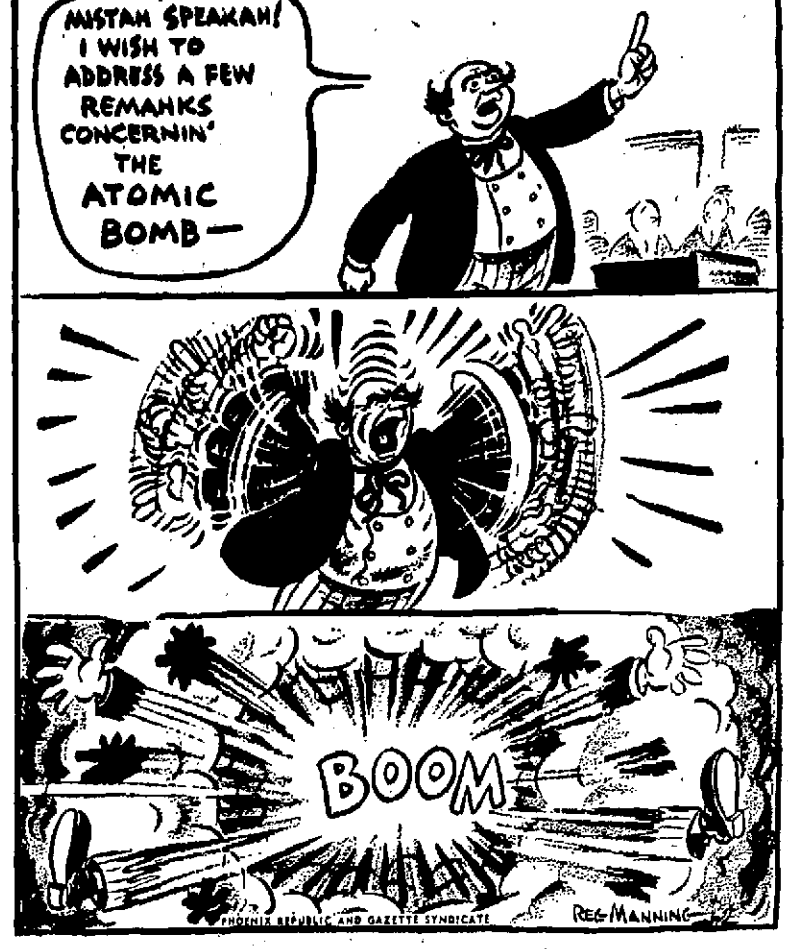

It would be well for teachers, parents, all of us, in fact, to remember that some physical disturbance may be causing difficulty in reading.

Neurosis
 Neurosis—believed you have a physical ailment when none exists—is becoming increasingly common. Send today for Dr. Barton's informative booklet on this subject entitled "Neurosis." To obtain it just send ten cents and a three cent stamp, to cover cost of handling and mailing, to The Bell Library, Fifth Avenue, New York 17, N. Y., and ask for your copy.

"At Century's Turn"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

In the years before Kingston's birth as a city, horse-drawn buses operated between the two villages of Kingston and Rondout, and the first horse car was run on August 19, 1866, between the two villages.

The day was a gala one. The first horse car was drawn by four horses with an old time bus driver known as Joany Kiefer handling the reins. Aboard the car was Goeller's Brass Band, which played all along the route.

Also on the car were Major Thomas Cornell, the directors of the railroad, and the members of the boards of the two villages. The car barn was on Bridge street—now Washington avenue—and stood about where the Washington avenue viaduct now stands, while the terminal was the old ferry shed on Ferry street.

Broadway at that time was known as Union avenue, and a tollgate stood across Union avenue, just south of Staples street. Here was stationed Richard Van Gasbeck, who collected toll from passengers who planned to make a trip from one end of the road to the other.

The first electric trolley car was run on July 31, 1893, replacing the old horse cars, and the fare was reduced to five cents, where it remained for a number of years. When it was decided to operate electric trolley cars in the place of the horse cars new tracks had to be laid, and trolley wires erected.

There are undoubtedly many older readers of this column who recall the days when the horse cars ran on Broadway.

Turning from the subject of transportation to politics, it was in 1921, that for the first time in the history of the city a fight was staged at the September primaries for the office of mayor of the city.

Mayor Palmer Canfield who was completing his fourth consecutive term that year, sought re-nomination at the unofficial Republican city convention, but he was turned down by the delegates who named former Mayor Walter P. Crane as the Republican candidate for mayor at the November election.

Mayor Canfield entered the primaries that September, but when the vote was counted he found that Mr. Crane had obtained the nomination.

The primary vote was light, but 59 per cent of the enrolled Republicans of Kingston voted. Mr. Crane received 1,742 votes, while Mayor Canfield polled 1,483. Crane's majority was 257.

Jacob Harris, a former merchant of this city, died suddenly on September 7, 1921, while writing a letter in his room in a hotel in Schenectady.

For many years Mr. Harris had been engaged in the boot, shoe and clothing business at 14-16 Broadway, this city, and at the time of his death he was employed as a traveling salesman for a large shoe concern. After leaving Kingston he made his home in New York city.

There are many still living in the city who will recall the Harris shoe store on lower Broadway.

—Close Ups—

By UPTON CLOSE

A person who compresses his opinions and observations in a column such as this over any considerable length of time becomes: 1, a paid propagandist; 2, a disciple of Expediency, whose middle name is Compromise; 3, an unscrupulous pecker through boulevard and bureaucratic keyholes; 4, a trumpeting prophet convinced of his own infallibility; 5, a poor man's Will Rogers; 6, a lofty-headed Crusader—telling, like Don Quixote, with windmills, to a windy cynic; 8, a philosopher, of sorts. Radio commentators, of course, may be listed under these same general classifications.

This simple formula may be applied to any development in the news. It reduces columnists and commentators to their lowest common denominator. Long since, the ordinary listener or reader has attached those particular numbers to his favorites and to the "unfathomable" he knows approximately what they are going to say before they say it. The process of tucking another item into one of his mental pigeonholes of prejudice is as automatic as the system which inspires such items. He does not want to be educated. He merely desires confirmation of his own beliefs. Taking a certain satisfaction in raging at those whose views conflict with his own, he can always feed his own vanity by consulting an old standby, remarking thereafter: "Now that's a somebody who talks sense!" Therefore, in a manner of speaking, Vox Populi not only underwrites what ghost-writes everything which appears in print or is broadcast.

The columnist and commentator either please the public or retire from public life. This is reasonable. The public pays the piper; therefore it should be entitled to call the tune. If Shakespeare had not been "commercial" in his own day, he would not be studied now. On the whole, the system of select opinion and elimination is equitable. Rarely does a voice cry vainly in the wilderness, provided the voice be sufficiently powerful. Occasionally, however, small pressure groups attempt to stifle voices which are in opposition to them, and the attempts are made at the expense of the public.

It is a truism, of course, that pressure groups—not the general public—sway the temporary destinies of nations. The public prevails in time because conflicting pressure groups tend to obliterate each other, but the period before that happy consummation is bound to be chaotic and threatening to individual liberties. Perhaps the present economic warfare is such a period.

The crowning goal of all had government and corrupt pressure groups is to silence opposition. Once the voices of criticism are smothered, evil men walk unafraid. It is questionable whether there is much honor among these thieves of the public strongboxes, but there is no question but that they unite into well-organized groups. These pressure instruments are brought to bear against the press and the radio. Being afraid, the public, whereas the general public is not, they often gain temporary victories.

That is why a commentator may be removed from the air, a columnist plucked from the paper, without the consent of the public which pays the freight. One of the tongues of Vox Populi is ripped out at the roots, and beyond a brief yell of pain, there is no general outburst of indignation. Another of the labeled groups, probably No. 1, takes the vacant place, and freedom of speech is forced to move over.

The legitimate columnist and commentator serve to make the great body of people articulate. Over a period of time, the constant airing of opinions and observations tends to crystallize certain ideas which have lain dormant in the minds of the people. Only in this manner is greater freedom and a better world in prospect.

Three Nations Have Given Public Statement on What Is Needed Among Nations — Feeling of Trust

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Nov. 17.—The United States and Britain and Canada have offered the whole world a constructive program for dealing with the military uses of the atomic bomb.

It is a program that promises to share the secret when "effective safeguards" against misuse have been developed. This is but a polite way of saying that when the nations really trust one another they can have the horrible weapon we have invented. It is also a way of calling attention to an obvious fact but one perhaps not realized everywhere, namely Britain and the United States, Great Britain and Canada have not the slightest fear that the bomb will be used against each other.

Clearly since the United States has demonstrated already that it does share the secret with one of its nearest neighbors in this hemisphere and with its biggest naval rival in another hemisphere, there need be no reason to question our sincere willingness to give up the full secret to others.

It will be said that the United States and Britain are using the bomb secret as a means of influencing diplomatic relations with Russia. Such a step, if true, would only aggravate Russo-American relations. It is not the intention of either the United States or Great Britain to trade the secret for some temporary concessions by Russia. On the contrary, the desire of the British and American governments is to create a permanently favorable atmosphere within which problems can be settled in the future even after the bomb secret has been given away and no leverage has been used up. That's why the official communique stresses the fact that each step or stage must be completed before the next one can be taken. Thus ways and means to insure an effective inspection of other countries must be accepted by all countries before interchange is to be materialized.

Would Russia, for instance, consent in advance to the admission of agents of the United Nations commission into factories and plants and the hitherto hidden areas of the Soviet Union? If after such a period of inspection during which an investigation of all sources of scientific or mechanical research or armament-making has been completed, then and then only will the next stage—sharing of the secret—be reached.

These are terms which, if the situation were reversed, Russia would undoubtedly insist upon. Clearly, the world-government school of thought which has been advocating the giving up of the secret to a super-state could not justly object to the above course for, if carried out honestly by all powers, the first and necessary step in the evolution of a world state will have been accomplished. This is because if the means of destroying a nation's sovereignty is in the possession of other sovereign nations, there must inevitably be created a relationship of mutual trust which could make any form of world government feasible.

To aim, however, in the direction of world collaboration or even to promise eventually to give up the atomic bomb secret is not to find at once a substitute for the slow processes of self-education whereby citizens of one nationality place themselves voluntarily under the jurisdiction, legal or quasi-legal, of a world government composed of and perhaps even dominated by the cultures, philosophies and basic attitudes toward law and morals of an entirely different group of nationalities. The transition will neither be simple nor achieved overnight.

All that can be said is that a start has been made to organize the discussion as to the disposal of the atomic bomb and to split the problem into concrete questions. World opinion must now do its part and it may well be that Russia will find it desirable to put her case frankly before the other nations of the world in order to exact from them the same pledges of self-denial and self-discipline with respect to our own political and economic operations as we now ask Russia to impose on herself as a condition precedent to the disclosure of the atomic bomb. The debate should soon begin—perhaps the most fateful debate of all times.

Leaves From Notebook Of War Correspondent

By HAL BOYLE

Fusan, Korea, (AP)—California-born Bob Fujikawa has been in service long enough to win the points required for a ticket home but there isn't any immediate likelihood he will be able to cash in on them.

"I got my points in the wrong army," explained the former Fresno truck gardener, who is a private in the Japanese armed forces.

Fujikawa is known as "Fresno Joe" to troops of the American 40th Infantry Division who took him on as an interpreter as soon as they heard his state-side slang. He helps them—still wearing his Japanese army uniform—in the task of sending hundreds of thousands of Nipponese soldiers and civilians, uprooted from Korea, back to their homeland. This port is the chief funnel for the homeward fare.

"We decided to put Joe to work for us," said his boss, Col. R. C. Stanton, Washington, D. C. "after we asked if he could speak English and he replied 'I getcha'."

"Fresno Joe" is something of a mascot in the 160th Infantry Regiment now but his future is a twilight matter, with Fujikawa himself completely uncertain what will happen to him, although he knows what he wants.

"I want to go home," he said simply. Which puts him in exactly the same mental frame as several million other young American-born soldiers who served under their own flag. His status, however, remains to be cleared. This is his own story of how he came to be eating rice in khaki under the banner of the Rising Sun.

"I came to Japan in 1940 to visit my uncle. It was the first time I had ever been there. The war broke out and—well, here I am."

According to "Fresno Joe," the Emperor didn't consult his personal wishes in the matter at all, and Japanese military authorities overlooked entirely the little item that he was an American citizen. They just handed him a rifle and pushed him into the middle of their

Hawk Attended Session of Trial

Describes Yamashita Case Now Being Held in Manila

Staff Sgt. William D. Hawk, Jr., who has been stationed near Manila, Philippines, attended the second day of the Yamashita trial. In writing to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Hawk, 83 Downs street, he describes it as "drama at its heaviest and almost beyond one's imagination to picture the actions that the witnesses described."

The important witness for the day was Francisco Lopez, M-G-M representative in Manila. Sergeant Hawk said that the sadistic atrocities he described were almost unimaginable. Although calm when he entered the court room, Mr. Lopez became emotional as he testified. "One girl only 13 was raped by over 15 Japs when she tried to escape the building (actually from under the porch of the German Club) to which the Japs had set fire," reports Sergeant Hawk in his letter. "The Japs surrounded the building with machine guns and with soldiers armed with bayonets. The people either stayed under the porch and were burned alive or were machine gunned or bayoneted when they tried to escape. One girl, after she had had the top of her scalp sliced off and was dead, was raped."

"A man tried to aid a girl to escape and resisted the Japs. As a result he was tied to a garage door, stripped and his sexual organs cut off and stuffed into his mouth." Another woman had one of her breasts sliced off and the Jap laughing threw it around like a baseball. Lopez emphasized how happy and gay the Japs were when they were committing these horrible sadistic acts. He estimated that 1,900 persons were killed in the German Club massacre.

Chinese Woman on Stand Another interesting witness at the trial was a Chinese woman for whom all of the questions and answers had to be translated. "It turned out exciting because after she testified and got up to leave, she looked across the room and saw Yamashita. She shook her fist at him and jabbered in Chinese, starting across toward him. The translator rushed to her to calm her down and also the prosecutor's staff."

"All during the trial Yamashita sat sober-faced. His interpreter gave him a running description of the activities. Both Yamashita and the other Jap general wore ribbons on their chests."

Since being in Manila, Sergeant Hawk had heard descriptions of some of the atrocities but he writes, "hearing them for three hours with no punches pulled left me almost exhausted." He attended the trial with two of his friends who had started for the scene of the trial at 4:45 a. m. They were the first spectators to arrive that morning and waited until 8 o'clock watching the changing of the guard; Jap prisoners of war cleaning up debris; and the arrival of the witnesses and government officials.

Frisked for Throwables "At 8 o'clock the M.P.'s frisked us for weapons or any article that might be thrown at Yamashita. An officer had an apple taken away from him once before. . . . the officer of the day gave instructions on behavior in court, no smoking, no talking, no moving around, no pictures to be taken."

"The court room is located in the former ballroom of the former residence of the U. S. High Commissioner to the Philippines, only a block from Manila Hotel, Dewey Boulevard. We faced a semi-circle of windows which overlooked the harbor and could see ships of all descriptions. There was a balcony around the other half of the room. On both sides of the balcony were movie cameras, another one was on the left side of the main floor, just a few feet from the defense counsel's table. On the bench, the prosecutor's desk and defense counsel's desk were microphones. The witness had a lapel mike fastened on after he was sworn in so everyone was able to hear."

"At about 8:25 a. m. Yamashita was brought in. With him were another Jap general and Hama-moto, the Harvard-educated interpreter and liaison officer of the Japanese high command in the Philippines almost from the beginning of the occupation to its end."

INDIA TO BUILD ENGINES The great Indian firm of Tata has taken over the East Indian Railway workshops at Singhbhum, according to reports from Bengal, and will manufacture locomotives and boilers after the war. They will be the first all Indian-made locomotives in history. India's railway mileage was increased greatly from the 50,000 miles of rail open to traffic prewar, to aid in the war against Japan.

Here's a quintet of popular musicians with the Johnny "Scat" Davis band which is to furnish music for the Congregation Ahavath Israel Ball, Thanksgiving Eve, Wednesday, November 21, in the municipal auditorium. This musical ensemble has played in leading night clubs and theatres throughout the country, besides being on all of the major networks, and making pictures. Prior to forming his own organization "Scat" Davis was the featured trumpeter and soloist with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. Ahavath Israel is fortunate in being able to present such a popular band to Kingstonians, said H. G. Rafalowsky, chairman of music and entertainment for the ball. He promises one of the best shows ever staged in Kingston.

MAN QUITS HOME IN WELL
Nine years of living in a well in his backyard turned 34-year-old Marcelino Santabarbara's hair white and made him deaf and nearly blind. A Spanish Socialist, he descended into the well when Franco's forces captured Zaragoza in 1936. His family drew all the water out and built a small room at the bottom where he lived until the Spanish dictator decided to drop political charges arising from the civil war.
Mlle. de Gaulle Engaged
Paris, Nov. 17 (AP)—The engagement of General de Gaulle's daughter, Elisabeth, to Commandant de Boissieu, de Gaulle's military attaché, was announced in all Paris morning newspapers today.
(AP)—Marines and sailors getting haircuts at the Ship's Service Barber Shop here have a lot of respect for Barber George E. Wahlen, 21-year-old pharmacist's mate 2/c of Ogden, Utah.
The fellow who wields the clippers and comb is a Congressional Medal of Honor winner.
Wahlen, convalescing here from wounds, was presented the medal by President Truman October 5 for heroism and self-sacrifice in caring for Marine wounded in Iwo Jima.
What Next?
Pueblo, Colo., Nov. 17 (AP)—The demand for red hair dye in Pueblo is on the upswing. There are many new redheads among Central High School football players and other Pueblo boys.
The girls say the boys want red hair like Van Johnson of the movies.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief
Eager Beavers
Vienna, Nov. 17 (AP)—The word leaked out that some women employees of the Post Exchange were looting stores and carrying the stock home under their dresses.
The 35th Military Police Battalion called for volunteers to stampede the women—and created a stampede of willing G.I.'s.
P.S.—A Wac got the job.
Two for One
Roswell, N. M., Nov. 17 (AP)—Ed Huston fired one shot, he says, and two ducks fell.
Not to be outdone, his Chesapeake retriever "Mazie" brought them both in on one trip.
Even Steven
Hamilton, Mont., Nov. 17 (AP)—They don't need any King Solomons around this southwestern Montana big game hunting area—not as long as they have Sheriff F. O. Burrell.
Burrell was called in to help settle an argument between two hunters, each of whom claimed a two-point buck killed in the mountains near here. The sheriff suggested that skinning the animal might prove something. Bullets from both hunters' rifles were found in the carcass.
The sheriff told them to divide the meat.
Home Remedy
Denver, Nov. 17 (AP)—Eight-year-old Betty Waterhouse has swallowed eight pennies in the last two years. Each time it happened Betty was on her way home from the grocery store, and her mother has finally hit upon a plan to prevent a recurrence.
The first seven pennies caused no trouble, but the eighth gave Betty a stomach ache, a 104-degree fever and had to be removed by a doctor.
It was then Mrs. Daisy Waterhouse decided to give Betty the exact amount for groceries so there won't be any change.
Distinguished Service
Camp Pendleton, Calif., Nov. 17

Chile was explored and conquered in the 16th century by Diego de Almagro and Pedro de Valdivia.
Scientists have been able since 1934 to develop a radioactive type of nearly all of the 92 chemical elements in nature.

Forward Passing Expected Feature In Capital Game

By JACK HAND

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—With Sammy Baugh and Sid Luckman tied for the forward passing lead, the air should be full of football at Washington tomorrow in the only 1945 meeting of the Redskins and the lowly Chicago Bears. It could well be the "passingest" game of all time.

Although the Bears have been eliminated mathematically from the Western Division race in the National Football League they have been coming on strong in recent games with Luckman retaining his old-time passing skill.

The "Skins," boasting an array of backfield talent with Baugh, Steven Bagarus, Frank Atkins, Bill Decorsvont, Wilbur Moore, Merlyn Condit et al, need a victory to retain their one-game advantage over Philadelphia in the eastern half of the circuit.

Philadelphia will be favored to add the scalp of the Pittsburgh Steelers to their string despite the return of Bill Dudley to the Pitt lineup, with Steve Van Buren tops among the league's ground gainers on an average haul of 6.6 yards per try, the Eagles hope to be able to take advantage of any faltering by the Redskins. A Philadelphia win and a Washington loss would bring them up to their November meeting tied for the lead.

Cleveland and Detroit, deadlocked for first in the Western Division, play on the road, respectively at the Chicago Cardinals and the New York Giants, the Rams, pressing on toward new league records with an average gain of 5.1 yards every time they run the ball from their formation, figure to have a "breather" with the cards who have won only once in eight starts.

Detroit added a new back, Tippy Madarik, who used to play for Gus Dorais when he coached at the University of Detroit.

Steve Owen's undermanned Giants, minus Marion Pugh, hardly figure to spoil the Lions-Rams "title" game at Detroit on Thanksgiving Day.

Green Bay's defending champion Packers, needing to sweep their last three games to keep alive a flickering mathematical hope, play at Boston where the Yanks likewise are struggling to avoid elimination.

Larkin Outpoints Moran in Garden, Wants Title Shot

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Having scored his fifth straight victory in Madison Square Garden, Tippy Larkin, the Garfield, N. J., contender, today was clamoring louder than ever for a shot at Freddy (Red) Cochrane's welterweight title.

The sharp-punching Jersey batter hacked up No. 5 last night when he jabbed out an unanimous 10-round decision over Nick Moran, the sturdy Mexican fighter.

Right after the bout, Angelo Pucci, Larkin's manager, repeated his $60,000 offer to Cochrane for a title match and said he would even go higher if anyone else outbid him.

In beating Moran, Larkin piled up a big first half lead with sharp left hand jabs. Moran came on strong and bothered Larkin in the sixth, ninth and tenth rounds but the 28-year old Garfield scrapper was able to keep his scrappy rival under control. Larkin, 8 7/2 to 2 favorite, was awarded the bout by the three officials on counts of 6-4, 6-4 and 7-3.

Larkin weighed 142 pounds, the heaviest of his career, to Moran's 139 1/2.

Byrd Is Picked As Man to Beat In Azalea Open

By HENDRIX CHANDLER

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 17 (AP)—Few low pros were touting steady-stroking Sam Byrd of Detroit, Mich., as the man to beat in Mobile's $10,000 Azalea Open golf tournament today as the meet went into its third round with a field reduced to 60.

After watching the former New York Yankee ballhawk pound out two straight rounds of 69 and 70 for pace-setting 139, Jimmy Thomson, the long-driving New Yorker, remarked that Sammy would be the boy to step up for that $2,000 Victory Bond first prize money, come Sunday.

The field was so closely bunched however, that it appeared to be anybody's meet. Only two strokes separated the four top players and any one of about nine players was given a chance to grab off the top prize money.

Right behind Byrd with a 140 was the veteran Benny Shute of Akron, Ohio, who added a one-under par 71 to his first round 69.

One stroke back of Shute with 141's were Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., and Stan Horne of Montreal, Canada.

Joe Kirkwood of Philadelphia, Pa., slipped to a 74 yesterday and dropped into a fifth-place tie with Arthur Doering of Denver with 142. Craig Wood came in with a blistering 67, two over the course record, for 144.

Other 36-hole scores include: Pat Currell, White Plains, N. Y., 146.

Joe Turnesa, Rockville Centre, N. Y., 148.

Clarence Doser, Hartsdale, N. Y., 149.

worked on the night shift for 57 years. James Barget, 70, is also on the night shift while Percy Hall, 82, who was in the South African and 1914-18 wars, is responsible for the safety of the men, ascending the mine.

Brighter Outlook For O&W Railway Branch Line Here

had receipts of $17,000 against expenses of $27,000.

There should be more carload freight in the Rondout Valley, Mr. Oakes said, suggesting that co-operation on the part of all interested might help. He saw no reason why the loss should not be practically wiped out.

In answer to a question, Mr. Oakes said that he did not have at hand figures for 1945 to date, but was certain the road was not yet operating in the black, or anywhere near it. Trustee Gebhardt remarked that some improvement had been shown during 1945.

Chairman Johnson said that the war had hurt business in the Rondout Valley. Speaking for the lumber and fuel business he said that the O.P.A. had shut off buying and it had been impossible to make anything like normal sales during the war years.

Prospects for Coming Year
The meeting was then turned over to the shippers and hotel men who gave their views as to what might be expected the coming year.

Morris Samter of the Kingston Lumber Corp. said that with the doing away with the O.P.A., outlook for business would be good.

Stocks, he said, were lower than they were during the war, but he would be glad to give the O. & W. 25 carloads tomorrow if he could buy the material. There is no question business will increase, he stated.

Practically the same report was made for the Clark and Davis Lumber Co. They had tried to advise shippers to use the O. and W. Joseph Levine, president of the Accord Lumber Industry, said that they opened in September and did little shipping in 1944, but had spent upward of $100,000 in new equipment and planned to put in a complete crushing plant for crushed stone. His firm has a government contract for 9,000 tons of ground limestone for Sullivan county—and that's only one, he said. They expect to ship large quantities of crushed stone for the New York city dam at Neversink and perhaps will ship as many as 500 carloads by rail. They also have had bids from New York state.

William Anderson reported increasing business. He had at least a ten per cent increase in 1945 and expected as much of an increase, or better, in 1946.

Speaking of the former Sun Ray plant at Ellenville, now vacated, Mr. Ewig said that there was something pending for use of that property. It has been occupied recently by the Baxter Laboratories, but they have closed their plant in Ellenville.

Mr. Johnson, speaking for the Devo Co., said that their growing average business in 1945, but the war had caused a large reduction, so that they had but 87 cars in 1944. He expects a large increase in business as soon as materials are available—probably 50 per cent in lumber, as a tremendous building program is in sight.

The Marvin Millwork expects a large increase, perhaps 50 per cent, in Sullivan county building, with a big percentage of the material coming by rail instead of boat. He looks for the demand for millwork to be more than double that of the past few years.

William L. Douglas of Rose & Douglas, said that their business was largely less-than-carload lots, but he looks for an increase of at least 25 per cent the coming year.

Attorney Napoleano stated that the New York Board of Water Supply would need some 50,000 tons of material—over 1,000 carloads—for completion of the work on the Meridian dam at Lackawack. Also that there would be continued business, for maintenance and repair work, in later years.

George Higgins, district representative for the Celotex Co., said that they hoped to ship an extra 25 carloads of their material into this area next year.

Mr. Hoffman, speaking for the Hotel Men's Association, said that the industry was a growing one and that most of the hotel men expected to build. They have been unable to do any building for the past three or four years, he said. They also were advertising the use of the O. & W. for their passenger business.

Samuel Divine said that Frederick, at Kerkhonkson, had six or eight carloads of freight a year, with a lot of less-carload shipments.

The Kingston Pressed Reed Co. with plant on Hurley avenue, reported that they brought in eight or nine carloads of the stock in work, and expect a 25 to 50 per cent increase next year.

Sanford Cross, who deals in lumber at Kyserville, expects to see a substantial increase in business next year.

It was stated that there is in view a six or seven hundred thousand dollar building program at the Napanoch Institution for Delinquent Juveniles. This will mean business for the railroad and the new buildings also will furnish future business for the road.

Manager Suter of the Rondout Paper Mills at Napanoch, said that they were increasing production and were installing new machinery for that purpose. When they will again be able to purchase pulp from Sweden and Canada the railroad will secure increased business from that source.

Meanwhile the plant is using a car of coal about every three days.

A representative of the Ulster Knife Co. at Ellenville told of the material they used. They have been busy during the war years, a large share of their production going to the armed forces.

Passenger Service
The matter of passenger service was brought up. Mr. Oakes said that the road could not operate passenger trains in the Fall, Winter and Spring months on account of the cost. It might be possible to run special trains on occasions.

Jacob Beusman, Napanoch hotel man, said that he would like to have a committee meet with the road's trustees to consider the question of passenger service. Trustee Gebhardt said that he would be glad to meet with such a committee.

Attorney LeRoy Lounsbury of Ellenville, who has appeared in former hearings, said that he realized that the road had operated in trying times and he felt that the trustees had done a fine job considering the circumstances. He said that he saw a general increase in business, however, with a number of industries coming into the Rondout Valley, all adding to the need for railroad facilities.

Secretary Williams of the Chamber of Commerce was present, and offered the services of that body whenever possible, in order to help keep for Kingston the rail outlet offered by the O. & W.

R. R. Attorney Oakes in closing said that he liked the spirit that had been shown at the meeting—that it spoke well for the future of the railroad. He suggested that they would make a further study of the possibilities, adding that if he were to make a personal prediction he would predict that the railroad would stay. However, he said, we want more facts in order to justify future action.

No Crime Problem
Tokyo, Nov. 17 (AP)—There is no crime problem in Tokyo, once the world's third largest city. Brig. Gen. Hugh Hoffman, provost marshal for the bomb-ravaged metropolis, said today that "behavior of U. S. servicemen and Japanese civilians alike has been surprisingly good" since the occupation began.

Capt. Michael S. Frish, chief of operations of the 720th Military Police Battalion, reported that he had traffic violations and theft of jeeps are the most common offenses.

Kingston's Milk Shortage Discussed By City Retailers

The critical milk shortage was discussed at length Friday evening at a meeting of the milk retailers of the city held at the office of the Ulster County Farm Bureau.

Decision was reached at the meeting that while the shortage continued home deliveries would have first preference, and stores second in receiving deliveries of milk.

Local dealers have been cut from 10 to 20 per cent of the usual supply of milk.

It was stated that it may be necessary to cut the quantity of milk delivered at the homes in the city. For instance where a family receives four quarts on delivery day it may be necessary to cut the number of quarts to two. This, however, will not be done unless absolutely necessary in order to see that every home customer receives a supply of milk.

All of the retail dealers expressed the hope that it would be possible to make home deliveries as usual, and that extra efforts would be made to supply the homes.

It was pointed out that in Poughkeepsie all deliveries of milk to the stores had been stopped in order that deliveries could be made to the homes there.

The World Today

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Foreign Affairs Writer

You don't have to be vindictive or cold-blooded to feel extreme satisfaction that justice has overtaken Joseph Kramer, the "Beast of Belsen," and 29 others who perpetrated the horrors of the Belsen and Oswiechim concentration camps.

The story isn't yet complete. A British military court at Luenenburg has convicted these fiends who killed by torture for the pleasure they got out of it. The wages of their sins still have to be collected—and the world at large hopes that payment will be made in full.

Those sins are too well known to need much repetition here. Tens of thousands of wretched prisoners (nobody knows just how many) were killed by slow and deliberate starvation. Some of them in their anguish cut flesh from bodies for food. Many were beaten to death or were tortured in other ways. The practices of Kramer and his evil crew were a throwback to the darkest days of primitive man.

It would be a welcome relief if we could say that the deeds at these two camps were isolated instances. But these sadistic murders represent far more than the atrocities for which they personally were responsible. They typify the fanatical Nazi of all types, the fanatical Nazi of all ranks, for Hitler and Goering and the other leaders inspired this crime, even if they didn't carry it out personally.

The Nazi Fuehrer was one of the most terrible mass-murders of all time. Kramer rubbed his hands over the slaughter of thousands, while Hitler dealt death to millions. But the point is that Kramer got his ideas from the Fuehrer. So did others like fat Hermann Goering, Hitler's second in command, who wouldn't raise his bejeweled hands to commit murder personally but dictated orders which brought the tragedies of war and extermination to a countless host.

Unfortunately this barbarism hasn't been confined to Europe. The Allies have encountered it in terrible forms in the Orient, and the Japs not only committed atrocities against our troops but
